Industry update: National Highway Sector Scheme online training

Helping to keep our skilled workforce current and safe

Over the last two weeks we have been exploring alternative methods of training delivery to give our providers and instructors the opportunity to continue to deliver classroom-based training online. This will enable the workforce in this important sector, traffic management and safety fencing, to maintain their skills on their cards as usual by training in a safe environment.

We are very pleased to report that this has been trialled successfully with a refresher course and online 'proctored' test. The courses listed below are available with immediate effect and we are working with our providers and instructors who wish to continue training through this difficult period.

We recognise that our instructors are an integral part of the training for their technical knowledge, experience and interactive skills therefore we have chosen a platform which allows the instructor to be visible to the learners at all times and is able to, for example, deliver a PowerPoint Presentation and share course material whilst still in full conversation with the group.

These courses are a great way to address the current challenge industry has in ensuring that the currency of skills is maintained and the workforce remains safe in carrying out their roles. The courses are delivered under controlled conditions by the instructor with a proctored solution for the online end of course test, which guarantees verification of the learner and ongoing monitoring of the learner during the test.
